

Why Are So Many Women Going To Prison? What Would You Do If You Were One Of Them?

Since the early 1980s, the California Department of Corrections – CDC has been involved in the largest prison-building program in the United States. The CDC Master Plan predicts that the growing inmate population will exceed close to 180,000 by 2010 from its current inmate population of over 165,000. The last CDC population's projections were done in spring 2005 which show women currently make up 14% of this amount with over 12,000 women in prison today as opposed to the 8,000 – 10 years ago when I left. With so many women suffering from mental, physical and emotional abuse from all walks of life, which have plagued them into criminal behavior that stems back to the age of 12 for some, it doesn't surprise me that the CDC projection for 2006 will increase to 13,500 – over 12% within one year. When you compound that with the average yearly inmate cost of $31,000 and the Prison Industry Association – PIA which profits from Major U.S. Companies while using cheap prison labor to make their goods, you have a multi-million dollar industry that doesn't help to rehabilitate individuals that ultimately want change, as many come out and go right back in because the system is not set-up to rehabilitate nor does the system provide adequate healthcare which has resulted in inhumane conditions and treatment which has led to many deaths of women who knew they were given time on the inside and expected to be released back into society, not a morgue.

In reading "TIME ON THE INSIDE", you'll discover: "Why more women are going to prison today more than ever" – "Why the Penal System promotes comfortability rather than rehabilitation" – "Why inmate deaths occur often" – "Why it's important for society to care about prisoner's rights" and "Why compassion is so important."

So come, read and experience "TIME ON THE INSIDE, Behind The Walls In A Maximum Security Women's Prison – Central California Women's Facility – CCWF, From An Insiders View.

"This book has an extraordinary view and looks into various areas that plague women, the problems within the California penal system and the lack of rehabilitation, which plays a great part of criminals continuously being warehoused, developing an attitude of comfortability and conforming to institutionalism". —Oprah Winfrey, Forbes Magazine 100 Most Influential and Wealthiest people, Emmy award winner and Americas #1 talk-show host, producer and actress would benefit from adding this to her collection.

"It will bring knowledge, laughter, tears and a much needed awareness that compassion and rehabilitation to understand and help with the social and economical barriers many women face which ultimately lead them into a life of crime and into the penal system". —Martha Stewart, Author, talk show host and most trusted guide to stylish living experienced and knows this first-hand.

"It will exploit the unacceptable medical conditions and lack of preventative care, which resulted in many deaths; however the cost of health care in State prison for women is sixty percent more expensive than it is for men". —Jackie Speier, California State Senator spoke of these conditions and has a hard time understanding why healthcare for women is more expensive then men if treatment is appropriate.
